Concerts Will Begin Sunday At Hillsborough

Italian Conductor to Lead
Initial Concert of Symphony Series

Promptly at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon, Bernardino Molinari, foremost exponent in Italy of symphonic music and conductor of the Augusteo Orchestra of Rome, will lift his baton to direct the personnel of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra at the first concert of the fifth season of open air concerts in the Woodland Theatre at Hillsborough under the auspices of the Philharmonic Society of San Mateo County.

Throughout the week the orchestra will be rehearsing under the tutelage of Molinari's inspiring direction and a program of rare beauty is assured those who take advantage of the privilege of hearing the concert amidst the charm of the natural setting that surrounds the outdoor theatre.

The Woodland Theatre programs this year will not be the same as those given in the San Francisco Tuesday evening series as the latter concerts will be broadcast and this precludes the inclusion many modern works and recent compositions which will be heard only in the Sunday afternoon programs.

A featured number of the first concert will be Respighi's "The Pines of Rome" for which there has been frequent and insistent demand since Molinari first introduced it to Woodland Theatre audiences on the occasion of his first two seasons ago.

The complete program is as follows:
Overture—"Don Giovanni" Mozart
Symphony No. 3 (Eroica) Beethoven
Intermission
"The Pines of Rome" Respighi.

Two Realty Men Freed on Count Of Grand Theft

Municipal Properties Men Held Not Guilty In
S. F. Court

Two real estate men who were charged with grand theft in regard to the handling of the sales of lots in the Devonshire Hills tract, just west of San Carlos, were freed in the court of Judge James Conlin of San Francisco this week. The men were John F. Humburg and Wallace Price, president and vice-president, respectively, of the Municipal Properties Co., now in the hands of a receiver.

Action against the two real estate operators was brought by R. F. Pfeiffer of Oakland, who was one of the prechases of land in the Devonshire Hills tract. The two men were indicted by the San Francisco grand jury in March.

The two men were freed on the count of grand theft from the fact that individual payments were all less than $30, although the total in some cases ran into thousands of dollars. Pfeiffer showed receipts indicating that he had paid $2500.

Since none of the individual payments were in excess of $30, Judge Conlin instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty, as thefts less than $30 constitutes petty theft, a misdemeanor.

San Mateo May Get Base For Jap Dirigible

Tract Offered Near Town As Site for Landing Of Air Craft

The possibility that San Mateo county may be made the United States terminal of a dirigible passenger line between this country and Japan was made known this week by Judge J. J. McGrath of San Mateo, president of the Peninsula Industrial Conference.

Judge McGrath has been making negotiations with Acting Consul General Toyoyi Kaneko in San Francisco. According to this announcement a $15,000,000 corporation has been organized in Japan for the purpose of inaugurating a regular dirigible service between the two continents. Negotiations have been made for a tract of land near Tokyo to serve as the Japanese base of the line, and a similar tract in the vicinity of San Francisco is now sought.

Judge McGrath has proffered to the Japanese consul all the necessary data in regard to the tract, which was offered some time ago to San Francisco as a municipal air base, prior to the purchase of the Mills field.

The tract is on Brewers island, and is said to offer ideal climatic and topographical conditions and in addition is within a short distance from San Francisco. The reasonable price of land on the peninsula is also advanced by Judge McGrath as an advantage of this site.

A grass fire in Woodside Heights kept a fire department busy for several hours on Wednesday afternoon. A wind from the northwest carried the fire through the dry grass of the hillsides with great speed and the flames jumped the roads of the tract as if they constituted no barrier worthy of notice. Two homes in the path of the fire were protected by back-firing and no serious damage resulted.

The proposition to create a police district for Woodside, which proposition was submitted to the voters at an election on Tuesday, was lost by a considerable majority for the opposition.

Mrs. Lillian Matson, mother of Mrs. William P. Roth of Woodside, passed away on Monday. She had been ill for some time.

Co. Government Takes Big Part of Taxes Collected

San Mateo County Is 15th In State in Point of Expenditures

By HOMER L. ROBERTS

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
SACRAMENTO, June 26—(UP)—County government in California is growing more costly every year.

Despite the effort to economize, through simplification of government functions, adoption of a county budget, etc., the costs continue to mount upward, according to a statement compiled this week by State Controller Ray L. Riley.

The 58 counties of California spent a grand total of $18,464,613.26 for conducting their government, last year, the statement showed.

San Mateo county ranked 15th among the counties in California in its cost of government with a total expenditure for the year of $263,968.

Under the head of general government, the controller lists such items as legislative offices, finance offices, law offices, other general offices, elections, judicial offices, general governmental buildings such as court houses, jails, etc.

Although the county board of supervisors is the main governing body, even that board's authority is limited when it comes to such matters as fixing salaries of county officers, adding new clerks or employees in county offices, etc., the state law requiring that this authority be in the hands of the legislature.

This practice culminated in the demand for legislation whereby counties may gain "home rule" at the last legislature. A committee was authorized to study home rule systems in use in other states and to recommend remedial legislation in 1931.

Los Angeles led all the counties of California in the cost of its county government, which totaled $7,393,088.17 last year. San Francisco was next, with $3,282,490.56, and Alameda county third with $1,258,480.91.

Although Alpine is the smallest county in the state, it did not rank lowest in cost of government. The lowest total figure for any county was that of Sierra, whose county government cost $21,794 for the year.

Although the death recently of Mrs. Leana Charity Donner App at Jamestown was generally believed to have removed the last survivor of the historic Donner party, two members of that ill-fated band are still alive, Gen. C. P. McGlashan is author of "The History of the Donner Party," and is recognized as an authority on this chapter of California history. Present survivors of the party, he said, are Isabel M. Breen-McMahon, San Francisco, and Naomi L. Pike-Schenck, The Dalles, Or. Both were declared to be in the branch of the party which spent the winter of 1846-47 at Donner Lake. Mrs. McMahon then being a babe in arms. Gen. McGlashan said the party started from Sanzamon county, Illinois, and later split up, one group going into Oregon and escaping the harrowing experiences of those who came to California.

Based on his successful activities during the first three months of this year, the stork promises to set up a new record for babies delivered in California in 1930. Figures given out by the State Department of Health show 21,056 homes were visited by the old bird during January, February and March of this year, an increase of 1758 or nine per cent over the same months of last year. A similar increase for the remainder of the year would mean 88,823 babies in twelve months. The highest number yet recorded was in 1924, when the total was 86,899. That year the birth rate also reached its apex, 22.2 per 1,000 of population. Last year it had dropped to 18.3. Of the 21,056 babies born in the first quarter of this year, 8,339 or 39.6 per cent were Mexican. This was a gain of 542 Mexican births. Births by cities were as follows: Los Angeles, 4,432; San Francisco, 1,591; Oakland, 993; Long Beach, 552; Pasadena, 293; Glendale, 273; Santa Monica, 197; Berkeley, 185; Alameda, 116.

With a "100 per cent paved city" as the ultimate aim, a survey of Santa Rosa's unpaved streets was in progress under the direction of City Manager C. O. Dunbar and City Engineer A. P. Noyes. Dunbar said that a very small portion of the city's streets, not over 15 or 20 blocks, remain unpaved.

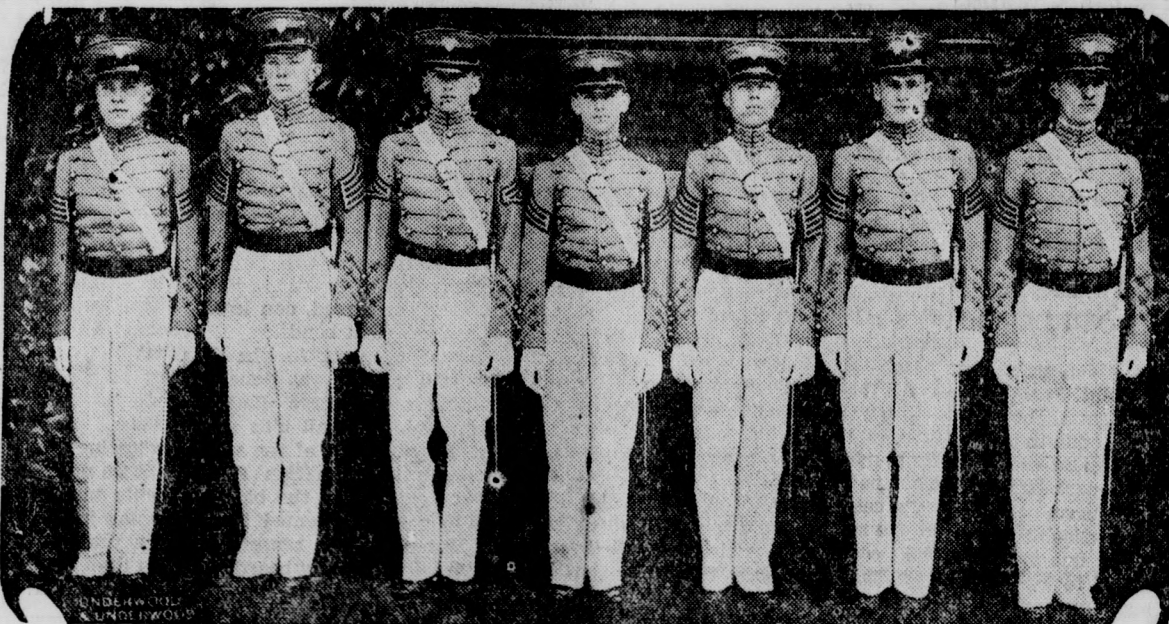

Having completed a survey of automobile camps throughout the State, the division of housing and sanitation of the Industrial Relations Department is prepared to take action against camp operators who fail to observe sanitary regulations. It is announced by R. W. Kearney, division head, of 842 licensed camps, Kearney said, 173 have been found in good condition, 383 are fair and 286 are bad. Auto camps were placed under State supervision eight months ago. Twenty operators already have been arrested, tried and convicted.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

Who Was Robin Hood?

THE character of Robin Hood may be said to live only as a sort of literary mystery, for the romantic career of this knight errant is known to us almost entirely through the many and varied stories that have been told of him by the romancer and the poet and there has been a great diversity of opinion regarding this outlaw hero. Some writers accord him historical origin, others maintain that he was nothing more than a mythological character, while still others regard him as a creature of the popular imagination.

It is a well known fact that many of the most popular ballads concerning Robin Hood are nothing more than tradition, such as those of the "Hynd Horn" and others that were simply abridgments of older metrical romances, too long to be intoned or recited at a single sitting and therefore shortened by the minstrels and fitted to tunes, of which there are some still in existence. Prof. F. W. Child, in the introduction to one of the volumes of his "English and Scottish Ballads," says on this subject: "My hypothesis is that the series of ballads associated with the name of Robin Hood are based partly on an earlier English romance and partly on historical reminiscences of the hero of that romance."

The first reference to Robin Hood in English literature is the second version of "Piers the Plowman" which, according to Professor Skeen, could not have been written earlier than 1337. Here the reference runs:

I ken nocht parly my pater-noster
As the preest it singeth,
But I ken rymes of Robin Hood
And Rudolf, Earl of Chester.

The common belief concerning Robin Hood is that he was the captain of a band of robbers or outlaws who inhabited the forest of Sherwood, in Nottinghamshire. Even though they delighted in robbing bishops and other wealthy ecclesiastics, they are reported to have been religiously disposed and to have retained in their band a domestic chaplain, Friar Tuck, whom Scott immortalized in "Ivanhoe."

Other noted members of the band were—supposedly, at least—Little John, William Scarlet, George-a-Green and Much, the miller's son. Robin himself is supposed to have been born at Locksley in the county of Nottingham, about 1190, and the date as assigned for the death of the popular hero is 1247—eighty-seven years later, which would indicate that the outdoor life of the band was conducive to longevity. The site of Robin Hood's grave, well marked but disputed by historians, is on the extreme edge of Kirkless park, not far from Huddersfield.

The presence of the grave, with the stone bearing its inscription, would make it appear that there is historical foundation for the story of Robin Hood's life, but many writers are rather inclined to the opinion that the name, though not of fictitious origin, was applied to a number of persons whose exploits were told and retold in England many centuries later. But, by some writers of a later age, it has been maintained that the prince of robbers was none other than the earl of Huntingdon, who, through misfortune or the mismanagement of his estate, had been compelled to adopt a predatory life.

A collection of Robin Hood lyrics, printed under the title "A Lytell History of Robyn Hood," was issued about 1495 and forms the most reliable history of the life and deeds of this forest hero. One of these ballads mentions that Edward II, having arrived at Nottingham, resolved forthwith on the extermination of Robin and his band. It is a singular coincidence that, in the household expenses of the same monarch, appears the name of "Robyn Hode," who appears to have been a porter of the chamber at the time that the hero, according to legend, resided at court.

It has been maintained, however, by many distinguished antiquarians, that Robin Hood is nothing more than a poetical myth, "one amongst the personages of the early mythology of the Teutonic people. It has been suggested that the very name of Robin Hood is nothing more than a corruption of "Robin of the Wood" and that the character is only to be regarded as the embodiment of the spirit of unrestrained freedom and sylvan sport, due to the almost total absence of any direct historical evidence concerning him.

"Kitecycle"
Kilo means one thousand. Cycle means a period of time in which a certain phenomenon occurs repeatedly in the same order. In electricity it is the period of time which is taken for an alternating current to rise from zero to its maximum potential and return to zero again in one direction, and then go from zero to maximum and return to zero in the opposite direction. Combining the two meanings, Kitecycle means the above proceedings performed a thousand times a second.

MARK'S BIGGEST MOMENT HAD COME

(By D. J. Walsh)

MARK MASON felt that his "big moment" had arrived the very instant he met Sallie West. Such a little doll of a girl she was with her great questioning eyes and her fluffy hair that needed no artificial wave to make it curl on a wet day!

The consensus concerning Sallie was, to his sorrow, that she was a useless, helpless little thing that would be of little help in any man's life except for ornamental purposes.

Because he knew that Sallie would be at the Mannerings house-warming and because he felt that it would be only wisdom to avoid being with her too much, Mark Mason took his small nephew with him in his low-slung sport roadster. He was accepted with shouts of joy from the others in the party when he turned up the natural roadway to the lodge, as they called it.

"What are you going to do with the boy?" they all called merrily.

Mark West packed the six-year-old out of the seat serenely. "Give him a good time in the woods," he replied calmly. "We'll bring you folks a string of fish for your supper tomorrow night, eh, Bobbie?"

"Betcha," Bobbie answered gravely. It wasn't much of a lodge yet. A small square of cabin had been cleared, with a log cabin at one side and a garage much larger than the cabin at the other end. Only the central living rooms and a half dozen sleeping rooms had been finished thus far, but the Mannerings were so in love with their woods home that they had decided to have the house-warming now and then another one later on when the house was completed.

"Isn't this just like the forest where Goldilocks found the home of the three bears?" Sallie asked Bob.

Mark clenched his teeth. This was more than he had bargained for. He had never seen Sallie before with children and the fact that Bob followed her about doggedly made it difficult for Mark to keep away from her. And, after all, that was the reason that he had brought Bob along—so that he wouldn't see too much of Sallie.

When evening came Bob suddenly recalled the fact that he had a mother. "I want my mother!" he kept moaning over and over again.

"I thought you wanted to come with Uncle Mark and fish and swim and be a big boy!" reproved his uncle crossly.

They were playing bridge before the great fireplace and Bob had been sitting on the floor playing contentedly until he wanted to be tucked into bed for the night. For a moment Mark was sorry that he had brought the child. His sister hadn't wanted Bob to come. In fact, she had questioned him closely about his reason for this sudden affection toward Bob.

"Now, I'll take good care of him and bring him back Monday morning," Mark had told him. "I'll give the child a dandy week end where there are real woods for miles and miles in every direction."

"Mind you, don't let anything happen to him," she had said the last moment before they had left.

"Here, Mark, take my hand, and I'll put him to bed," Sallie said suddenly.

Mark took her hands and dropped into her chair, trying not to notice the broad smiles on the faces of the other three at the table. In the room off the gallery, where she had taken Bobbie, Mark could hear her singing a little song about three little kittens who had lost their mittens and Bobbie's contented murmurs came now and again. Then a scream startled them all galvanically.

"Oh!" screamed Sallie. It's a for est fire! Look! Look!"

There was an instant of silence and then a mad rush toward the door. "Get the cars out of the garage," said Mannering, "and we'll make it all right!"

But the opposite end of the clearing was already in flames that leaped thirty and forty feet into the air. Sparks showered down. Roaring almost like that of surf filled the air and acid smoke filled their nostrils and mouths so that speech was almost impossible.

No one waited for any one else. Primitive days had returned and each one lunged for himself into the darkness, with self-preservation as the only thought of the moment.

Sallie alone remained behind, her great eyes seeming to question wonderingly what should be done. Even in that moment of tense fear Mark could not help but admire her as she stood with her arm thrown across the child's shoulders protectively.

"Run, Sallie, run!" Mark urged her. "I'll carry Bob!"

"But where will you carry him?" she asked quietly. "In all of this forest there is no place of shelter from forest fire. Everything will burn—"

"Alice didn't want me to bring Bob," said Mark, "and now—now—"

"Down near the garage are the carpenter's ladders," she interrupted. "You stay right here, Bob, and don't you move! Do you understand? We'll come back to get you, but—don't stir from this spot! Understand?"

She took Mark's hand and pulled him along. He reached for Bob's hand, but she tugged him along.

"We'll get the ladders and put them down the well," she said. "There will be a place the fire can't touch. It will leap over and Bob will be safe. If the others—"

They as she was, Mark found that she had strength enough to help pull the long ladders. As soon as he had them together and was getting them into the well she hurried for the child.

"Uncle Mark first to see that you don't fall in," she said, "then Bobbie boy and then Sallie. Ooh-hoo!" she called to the others, but the only answer came in the form of shrill cries in the far distance.

With right hand Mark climbed down the black well, holding up his arms for the boy. Above him on the ladder he could vaguely see Sallie when the flames swept the clearing. Sparks fell in on them occasionally and sputtered in the water below.

"All right, Sallie?" asked Mark.

"All right," she answered, with an apparent effort to steady her voice. "I wish you'd be my Aunt Sallie," said Bob suddenly. "Will you?"

Sallie was silent.

"I wish you would, too, Sallie," said Mark gravely. "I—I never expected to ask you to marry me when we were down a well, but—will you, Sallie?"

He knew now that his biggest moment had come.

And although Sallie's voice was very small, the answer was in the affirmative.

The Failure

Mayor Thompson, welcoming the Australian boys' band to Chicago, said in the course of his address:

"America is so rich in opportunities that the man who fails today is likely to resemble Judson Slosson."

"Judson Slosson ran the general store in Croydon Four Corners. He was dozing on the sidewalk in front of the store one balmy afternoon, his chair tilted back against the wall, when a boy awakened him."

"Kin ye let me have half a pound of dried beef, Mr. Slosson?" the boy said.

Judson got up. He stretched himself and yawned. Then he slouched into the store grumbling:

"Consarn the luck! Nobody but me sells dried beef in this old burg. I suppose."

Like Breaking a Bill

Franklin P. Adams says that the best child story that he ever heard is this one. He was dining with a few members of the Cornell university faculty at the home of Dr. Louis Agassiz Feurtes. During the meal course the shrill voice of the 7-year-old Feurtes daughter was heard from the upper regions, "Mamma."

Mrs. Feurtes elected to ignore the appeal.

"Mamma!"

"Yes?" called Mrs. Feurtes from the table, while conversation suspended.

"There's nothing but clean towels in the bathroom. Should I start one?"—Montreal Star.

Much Rejected Manuscript

The proportion of manuscripts submitted to magazines that is actually bought depends upon conditions. The editor of one national weekly states that his magazine purchases approximately .004 per cent of the manuscripts submitted to it from one year's end to next's end. He adds that from 80 to 90 per cent of fiction submissions come from people of no professional experience or training what ever.

Blood Transfusion

In New York city, where there is an association for this purpose, women are not accepted as donors of blood for blood transfusions. Some of the reasons given are that their veins are too small, they have not the average strength of men, and are not as readily accessible. In England women are accepted.

"Go to Bed, Mary"

Little Mary was nothing if not polite. She had heard that the minister was leaving their church for a new pastorate. Her mother had the minister to dinner shortly before he left and Mary, carefully waiting for a pause in the conversation, remarked: "I hear we are going to have the pleasure of losing you."

GOOD POSTURE IS QUITE IMPORTANT

Avoid Faulty Ways of Standing and Sitting.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Good posture throughout her active day is a matter of more importance to the homemaker than she may realize. It makes all the difference between weariness and freshness when her work is done. Faulty ways of standing and sitting cause much unnecessary fatigue, backache, tired feet, and a general feeling of slump which must be quite out of proportion to the amount of work done. If bad posture becomes habitual the spine may be affected, the shoulders become "round," the ankles may have a tendency to "run over," or other defects may develop. Sometimes these are sufficiently serious to cause displacement or cramping of internal organs leading to many physical ailments.

It is fairly easy to catch oneself stooping unnecessarily over the sink, the kitchen table, the wash tubs, or standing, sweeping or mopping, cooking at the stove, and so on. When one is making some dish which must be "stirred constantly," it is easy to forget about posture and allow the body to sag.

The illustration, taken by the United States Department of Agriculture in a Massachusetts farm kitchen, shows just how to stand properly when busy at the stove. The chest is high, the head erect and the back straight; the worker is standing squarely on both feet, which, incidentally, are clad in well-fitting, low-heeled shoes in good repair. The stove surface is at a good height for this homemaker.

FRUIT PUNCH IS PLEASING POTION

Delicious to Serve at Festivals or Parties.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

About fifty people can be served with punch made from the following recipe. While strawberries are in season, it is a splendid beverage for festivals, school and church socials, parties or a wedding. The proportions have been tested by the bureau of home economics and found to result in a very satisfactory blend of fruit flavor. One secret of making any punch evenly sweet is to prepare a sirup from the sugar and water instead of using plain sugar, which, of ten remains undissolved at the bottom of the punch bowl.

4 cups sugar 2 quarts freshly made strong tea
2 cups water 1/2 cup salt
2 dozen oranges 1/2 cup salt
2 quarts strawberry juice, bottled, ale or carbonated water or 2 quarts crushed fresh fruit.

Boil the sugar and water together to make a heavy sirup, and cool. Scrub the oranges and lemons and squeeze out the juice. Barely cover the fruit skins with water, let stand for an hour or longer, pour off the water and add to the fruit juice. Add the other fruits and the tea. Just before serving add chopped ice, the ginger ale or carbonated water, and if the punch is too strong, ice water in small quantities until the punch is the flavor desired.

Fell on Lamb Carcass Is of Great Importance

The fell is the thin papery outer covering on the lamb carcass. Although recipes frequently advise that it be removed before cooking, it is now believed, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, that flavor is not affected by the fell. Leg of lamb keeps its shape better if cooked with the fell, but shoulder, saddle, and chops are improved by its removal. Unless a roast from which the fell has been removed is rubbed well with flour, it will require longer to cook than a piece with the fell undisturbed.

LOCATING ICE BOX AND KITCHEN CENTERS

Good Location for Refrigerator With Outside Door for Iceing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The illustration shows an excellent location for a refrigerator with an icing door opening to the back entry. This refrigerator can be filled without having the ice man come into the kitchen, and it is close to the entrance door so that milk, butter, lettuce and other foods kept in the ice-box can be put away with a minimum of trouble and lost time. The position of the refrigerator was selected not only with respect to ready storage of foods and convenient icing, but because it is in the right relation to other work centers in this kitchen.

The entry was at the northwest corner of the room. Following around from left to right, the kitchen cabinet of food preparation center comes next on the west wall; at the south end there is a sink with double drain-boards, placed below a window for good lighting, with a dish closet at right angles to it, in the southeast corner of the room. This dish cupboard is of the two-way type or pass closet type in the connecting wall between the kitchen and dining room. It is so located that dishes washed at the sink can be put away without any extra steps, thus making a compact clearing away and dishwashing center. The stove is on the fourth wall, next to the two-way closet and only a step from the sink, so that pans which have to be filled with water are easily transferred to the stove or cooking center, and from the stove to the service counter of the two-way closet. The home economist specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture who planned this kitchen kept constantly in mind the work which was to be done in it.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Remove spots on soft felt hats by rubbing with fine emery paper.

Silk underwear lasts longer if washed often in mild soap suds and lukewarm water.

Oilcloth curtains, bound with bright-colored, bias tape in a harmonizing

To wear hose that are too short or to fasten supporters too tightly both shorten the life of silk stockings.

The meals in many American homes are too high in protein, starch and sugar and lack fruits and vegetables which contain needed minerals and vitamins. Many homemakers may find that a change in the menu brings more health for all the family.

Pilots of Big Lacrosse Teams

Friendly rivalry between the New world and the Mother country is expressed as Capt. S. G. Tiemann of the Cornell lacrosse team lines up with Captain Grauer of the Oxford-Cambridge team just before the international match. The game ended with a 2-2 tie.

Catcher Earl Smith Is Kept Idle for 60 Days

Earl Smith, Cardinal catcher, finds himself penalized by a league rule for which he was partly responsible. The Cardinals signed Smith after the Pirates had given him his unconditional release, all clubs having waived on his services. Clarence Mitchell was obtained in the same way after all clubs had declined to pay the Phillies the waiver price of $4,000.

Club owners decided that Sam Brendon had stung them twice, getting two ball players for nothing, so they passed a rule at their next meeting that when a player was given his unconditional release any big league club signing him within 60 days would have to pay $4,000 to the player's former club.

If it were not for that rule Smith probably could sell his services to some major league club, but the $4,000 tag keeps him idle for 60 days.

Hitting Sensation of 1930 Is an Old Timer

The 1930 hitting sensation of the National league, George Fisher, of the Cards, has had considerable experience in baseball and John McGraw is not the first big league manager to let him go.

Fisher, now twenty-eight, was a pitcher in the Eastern league at eighteen. Joe Cantillon got him and made an outfielder of him at St. Joseph. He hit 352 and 359 two years and then was sold to Washington. Then followed a year at New Haven, two years at Minneapolis and three at Buffalo. He always has hit over 300.

Offer for Horse

Samuel Ross of Washington, owner of the sensational two-year-old, Harry Scott, has refused an offer of $50,000 for the colt, which recently won the Pimlico Nursery stakes. The son of Scotch Broom was bred by Ross, and the latter had made preparations to race his star in the big juvenile specials at Belmont Park and Saratoga. According to reports the bid was made by Trainer Fred Kraft on behalf of Rudolph Spreckels of California.

Curly Brown's Estate

Dividing an estate of approximately $850,000, the will of Harry D. ("Curly") Brown, oil man and race-track promoter, has been filed for probate in Superior court at Los Angeles. The will bequeathed $5,000 to a sister, Mrs. Jane Elizabeth Harris; provided a trust fund of $50,000 for another sister, Rachel W. Lane, and a brother, Richard M. Brown, and a trust fund of $100,000 for two grandsons, Harry O. Brown III and Howard Brown.

Giant Reduces

J. Harry (Babe) Connaughton of Philadelphia, former Georgetown university guard, who went on a berth on the 1926 all-American eleven, jumped on a scale after that season and registered, 300 pounds. Today Connaughton tips the beam at 290 pounds, the reduction in weight being due to a strenuous diet-exercise program. He stands 6 feet 1 inch in height and believes his present condition is right for the practice of law.

RULE MAKES VETS ROOKIES AGAIN

President of Southern Circuit Makes Odd Order.

A flock of grizzled old guys with graying hair are in the same class with the Southern association's tender youths, John D. Martin, president of the loop, has ruled.

In other words, the old warhorses signed as free agents are classified as rookies under the league's Class B ruling which requires that each club carry five players who haven't had a season's experience in Class A baseball.

Martin's interpretation made "rookies" of such veterans as Lee Meadows, former Pittsburgh pitching ace, now with Atlanta; Milton Stock, formerly with St. Louis and another Crackers; Jimmy Johnston, ex-Brooklyn infielder, on the Atlanta payroll, and Ivy Wingo, one time Cincinnati backstop, who also graces the Atlanta lineup.

Other "rookies" are Wild Matthews, one time spark plug for Philadelphia and Washington; Frank Walker, Atlanta outfielder who once sold himself from the Sally league to the New York Giants; Frank Brazill, Memphis first sacker, and Jim Poole, Nashville first baseman, who has been in about every class of baseball played.

The model of a new stall starting gate has been shown at Belmont Park. It appears to be an improvement over others of the kind in that it is less cumbersome and can be put in place after the horses arrive at the starting point and can be swung off quickly. It is called the swing quick gate.

The stalls fold up when not in use and are heavily padded. The mechanism is simple and said to be fool-proof. The stalls are mounted on a carriage which swings on a quadrant.

It is planned to build a full sized gate to test the practical operation.

Present-day flight managers are so cautious we expect before long to hear that one won't let his man do any shadow boxing until he investigates the shadow's record.

The Pacific coast conference will not follow in the big ten's footsteps and employ a commissioner to supervise athletics. The faculty representatives of the ten schools in the conference, at their meeting at Seattle, voted in favor of the report presented by a committee of three rejecting the "commissioner" plan recommended by the graduate managers of the organization at their fall meeting in San Francisco.

A committee of faculty officials and graduate managers will be appointed, however, to investigate ways and means of selecting officials to referee and umpire athletic games.

Probably the only truly international links in the world are those of the golf club at Basel.

The club is Swiss, but it is located in France. And the most curious feature is that it is a little customs-free spot, surrounded by customs guards who allow the club members to come and go without examination. Instead of passports, the members merely show their club cards. Some are so well known their faces are their passports.

The club was formed in 1923. The American Consul, Calvin M. Hitch, was the only American. Now there are several of his countrymen among the 175.

Upholding the football coaching regime of Gilman Dobie, a member of the Cornell university athletic council has recommended that no changes be made in the staff.

The associated students of the University of California have voted $1,500 for further research into possible prevention and cure of "athletic foot."

Gene Sarazen, former open and professional golf champion of the United States, will try again for the British open golf championship. The long-hitting pro, who finished third in the United States open last year, two strokes out of a tie for first place, was runner-up to Walter Hagen in the 1928 British open, completing 72 holes of play with a score of 294 to 292 for the champion.

For some time Sarazen has wavered in a decision to try for the British open.

Elbets field, home of the Brooklyn National league team, will be enlarged to seat 55,000 fans. The work will start in the fall and the field will be named Brooklyn stadium. The stands will be double-decked.

Harry Rawdon, barber at Rhode Island State college at Kingston, R. I., rewards every member of the college nine who cracks out a home run in intercollegiate games with a free haircut.

John McGraw recently said that he thought Walter Berger of the Braves might succeed Babe Ruth as home-run king. To show his appreciation Walter made three home runs in a double-header against the Giants, which materially aided in a twin killing.

The world's baseball scoring record was equaled at Fort Wayne when the Fort Wayne Chiefs and the Springfield team of the Central league together piled up a combined total of 56 runs in a wildly sensational ball game which resulted in Springfield winning by a score of 35 to 18.

The combined score equals the world's record made July 21, 1923, by Springfield and Peoria in the Three-I league. Fourteen home runs were made in the game.

For the convenience of office boys in the towns that take up night baseball, we assume that grandmother is now buried in the evening.

Road Runner Unchanged From Ancient Time?

The long-legged road runner, a bird whose habitat is in the southwestern part of the United States, has resisted evolutionary tendencies and remained practically unchanged since Pleistocene time, perhaps 100,000 years ago, according to a University of California graduate after a careful comparison of the long-legged road runner with those of similar birds found in the Pleistocene tar beds of Rancho La Brea, Los Angeles.

The study was made by Leigh Larson from specimens furnished by the University of California museum of vertebrate zoology and by Dr. Loye Miller, professor of biology at the University of California, at Los Angeles.

In explanation of the problem presented by the road runner, Mr. Larson says:

"It may be assumed that the modern road runner is the result of a marked change from the remote common chicken ancestry by gradually increasing leg development with a corresponding reduction of the wing elements. Although Pleistocene is relatively close to us geologically, there have been faunal changes since then, and in some instances, it is judged by some students, evolutionary changes. The bird branch of the theoretical evolutionary tree was the latest group to separate from the reptilian stock, and so the evolutionary history of birds is comparatively late. A degree of change since Pleistocene might therefore be a logical presumption, and it has been proffered in some instances.

"With reference to the road runner, then, certain questions come to mind. First, whether the Pleistocene road runner had more powerful and therefore more useful wings, and less developed legs, than the road runner of the present time? Second, has the road runner carried on further development since Pleistocene, or has it been a perfectly stable form for some 100,000 years?"—Boston Herald.

125 Boys Attending Pescadero "Y" Camp

One hundred twenty-four boys and leaders are enjoying a wonderful time at the Y. M. C. A. Camp.

According to a letter just received from the "Y" Camp at Pescadero the boys are all in fine health and enjoying a wonderful time.

The camp is located in Memorial Park and includes an area for play, swimming and tent space. Daily competition is being held between tent groups in baseball, archery, darts, horseshoes, swimming, golf and basketball.

In the afternoon the boys take nature study, first aid and camp craft.

One of the features of camp is the Indian camp where, under the direction of Ross, a full blood Indian chief, he is teaching the boys much of Indian craft and is preparing an Indian pageant in which all of the boys will participate. The pageant is to be given in a natural amphitheater at camp on Friday evening.

Following is a list of leaders at Camp Yu-Mi-Ci-A: Director R. W. Simcock; Associate Director, R. A. Hohberger; doctor, Leon Mermod; storekeeper, Ben Gibson; chef, Charles Carson; special instructors, W. Ross and Kenneth Eells; leaders, Richard

Lorton to Run for Sheriff's Position

To The Public:

I announce myself to the people of San Mateo county as a candidate for the office of sheriff at the primary election August 26, 1930.

My long business experience enables me to know that only competent men who are especially fitted for the service should be employed as deputies, also that the office should be in department form under efficient leaders. Proper corrective measures should be applied to prisoners confined in the county jail, in part time employment, which could be given them, instead of merely letting them deteriorate physically and morally in close confinement.

ICE REFRIGERATORS
.. your friends will follow suit ...

Best proof of the desirability of the new 1930 ice refrigerators is that when one woman trades in her old ice box on a new one ... in nine cases out of ten her friends follow suit.

Of course these new refrigerators have beauty ... and greatly improve the looks of any kitchen ... but, more than that, they offer entirely new advantages in food capacity ... saving in ice bills ... protection to food ... and greatly reduced prices (imagine beautiful 1930 white and pastel colored ice refrigerators selling as low as $25 to $65); and on easy terms.

Your iceman will make you a liberal allowance on your old ice refrigerator and deliver a new one exactly suited to your needs. It will pay you back its cost by cutting down your ice bills. Phone him today for full particulars ... and remember, ONLY ICE gives true refrigeration ... and preserves the natural flavors and appearance of your food.

Don't pay more and get less! A chemical refrigerator would represent in first cost alone, the equivalent of your ice bills from now until 1942. There is no safe substitute for ICE refrigeration. Why pay more and get less? Start taking ice today.

NEW SAFEWAY STORE TO OPEN HERE TODAY

Broadway Market of Well Known Chain To Be One of the Finest in Safeway's
Vast Organization

It is announced that Safeway and market in Redwood City to Stores, Inc., will open another store day. Announcement of the addition of this new store and market to Redwood City's business houses was made by P. J. McNamara, district manager for the concern, with offices at San Jose.

In connection with the opening of this second store and market in Redwood City, McNamara stated that the new unit would occupy a structure especially erected for it and that it was anticipated this would be one of the finest and most modern stores and markets in the vast Safeway chain.

According to McNamara, the new store and market will be operated on the self-service plan and will contain all of the very latest improvements in grocery store merchandising.

A feature which was emphasized in the discussion of the new market was the fresh fruit and vegetable department which it is claimed will be unusually attractive. In this connection, McNamara pointed out that Safeway Stores is one of the largest purchasers of California grown fresh fruits and vegetables of any concern in the country. It is said that their exportation of California products to supply their stores in other states amounts to many millions of dollars annually. In fact, McNamara said Safeway annually purchases more than $30,000,000.00 worth of California grown and manufactured food products, most of which are distributed by this great system in territories entirely outside of the state.

Touching briefly upon the history of Safeway Stores, McNamara said that this concern now owns and operates approximately 4,000 stores and markets in 21 states, Canada and Hawaii. They are said to employ some 12,000 people and do an annual business estimated for this year to exceed $250,000,000.00. Their sales for 1929 were in excess of $213,000,000.00.

A feature of the company's plan of operation as touched upon by McNamara is the profit sharing plan enjoyed by its store and market managers. Under this plan, store and market managers are paid a living salary and in addition thereto, almost one third of the net profits of the stores and markets they operate.

The firm is said to have been founded in 1915 with one unit in a small town in Idaho. Since that time, it has grown to its present vast proportions and now rates as the third largest food chain store in the world. The president of the company, M. B. Skaggs, as well as many of the officers and executives, live in Oakland, California, and practically all of its personnel is said to be made of western men and women.

Mr. McNamara stated that the new store, when opened, would be especially convenient to San Francisco commuters who might leave their orders with this store in the morning before taking the train to San Francisco, and find them ready packed for them upon their return that evening.

The manager of the new store will be Mr. Crocker. The market will be in charge of J. Wanamaker. Both of these men with their assistants, will make their homes in Redwood City.

Farm Engineering Gains
For 15 years the federal government has been teaching agricultural engineering to the farmers of this country. In those 15 years the work has increased 1,500 per cent. At least, the expenditure has gone up about that amount.
The work of the extension is devoted to problems of farm water supply, soil erosion, farm machinery and other similar matters. Its work is now carried on in 25 states.

Ft. Meyers, Fla.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine I ever heard of. Before my baby was born I was always weak and rundown. I had nervous spells until I couldn't do my housework. A lady told me about the Vegetable Compound and it strengthened me. Beside my own housework I am now working in a restaurant and I feel better than I have in three years. I hope my letter will be the means of leading some other woman to better health."—Mrs. BERTHA RIVERS, 2914 Polk St., Ft. Meyers, Florida.

ONE PRESCRIPTION MADE FAMILY DOCTOR FAMOUS

Seldom has any single act been of greater benefit to mankind than that of Dr. Caldwell in 1885, when he wrote the prescription which has carried his fame to the four corners of the earth.
Over and over, Dr. Caldwell wrote the prescription as he found men, women and children suffering from those common symptoms of constipation, such as coated tongue, bad breath, headaches, gas, nausea, biliousness, no energy, lack of appetite, and similar things.
Demand for this prescription grew so fast, because of the pleasant, quick way it relieved such symptoms of constipation, that by 1888 Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it put up ready for use. Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is always ready at any drugstore.

Let Vast Riches Slip Through Fingers

London.—"It's all in the game!" In that laconic sentence was expressed the fatalistic philosophy of a man who once was rich beyond all the dreams of avarice and who now lives in complete and lonely poverty in a remote section of the Transvaal.

Nearly half a century ago the name of Samuel Honeyball was famous throughout the world as one of the four mining prospectors who discovered the richest gold deposit in the world, the Rand gold mines which have been valued at $1,000,000,000 and which have yielded five times that much to their lucky owners.

Found Wreck of Pauper.

Honeyball recently was found living in penury—shabby, unkempt, aged, the wreck of a man who gained a world and lost it, the living hero of a stranger and more fantastic tale than novelists ever told. But he has no regrets, no resentments, no ill-feelings and but one explanation for the turn in his fortune.

It was nearly fifty years ago that

Londoners were startled by the amazing news from Africa that a rich gold deposit, the richest yet, had been discovered by four men in the bleak ravines of the Transvaal.

Stories of untold wealth began to be heard and before many months men from all corners of the world began to sift into the Transvaal.

Great Discovery Made.

And Honeyball was one of the heroes of the rush, rich and famous. And deservedly, for with his three companions Honeyball prospected in the wild ravines and baboon-infested plains.

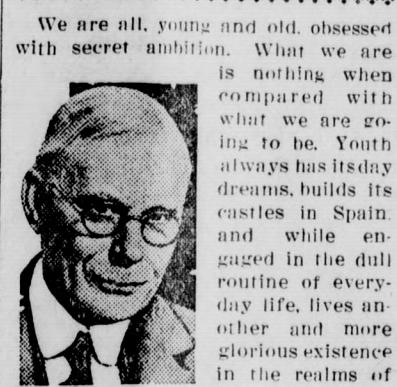

Then the great discovery in the Witwatersrand district was made. Gold, conglomerate beds of it, were found. And in spite of the amount of precious metal the Rand mines have given up since they were discovered nearly half a century ago, the amount still there, waiting to be dug out, is still measured in billions by mining experts. But Honeyball is living in a remote section of the country, depending for his livelihood upon a pension of $3.10 a week.

How he lost his untold wealth is not known and Honeyball will not tell. He prefers not to discuss the matter.

AMBITION

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois

We are all young and old, obsessed with secret ambition. What we are is nothing when compared with what we are going to be. Youth always has its daydreams, builds its castles in Spain, and while engaged in the dull routine of everyday life, lives another and more glorious existence in the realms of imagination. We have all intended to be what we are not.

Nelson, whom I knew as a boy, was going to congress. He pictured himself rising to oratorical fame, swaying the rulers of the nation with his fiery words, possibly landing finally in the Presidential chair. He died last week on a small farm in central Illinois, a good citizen but never having made a speech, never having had a political job in his life. Perhaps he developed a new ambition before he died. You, too, have had your secret ambition, and I mine, and see where we are today—as far from it as are the poles from each other.

Bryant across the street from me—thirteen years old he is—doesn't care for school. He would be an aviator and fly across the Andes. Walter sees himself on the stage—Charlie Chaplin or George Arliss or even one of the "Gang." Tom is going to be a great engineer and build great bridges rivaling the Tay bridge of which he has seen only the pictures. No one of them probably will ever do what he now imagines, for Bryant is a poet mechanic, Walter has no stage presence and Tom is flunking arithmetic.

It is curious how these secret ambitions cling to one even when middle age has been reached or long since passed. Saxton is sixty and an accomplished surgeon, and so far as one could guess will stay at his profession until he is carried off by the undertaker. What he would like to do, he says, and what he intends to do, is to quit his profession, buy up the old farm on which he was born in New England, and raise sheep—lamb for the spring market—he's always adored sheep and he knows he could make a go of it. The joke of it all is that Saxton really thinks that he will some day do it.

"TROTTEUR"

Gordon is a farmer, not a particularly aggressive farmer, but making a living and something more. He's fifty and has never written a paragraph for publication in his life. He tells me he is going to quit the farm some day and strike out as a newspaper reporter. He imagines that it would be a pleasant and easy life. Poor man; how he would be disillusioned!

Smith, who is teaching English in a small cottage, in a moment of confidence, told me the other day that some day he hoped to have saved a hundred thousand dollars. He is going down to Florida then and play golf on the Belvedere-Biltmore links.

It is a good thing to have an ambition even though we never realize it; it keeps us going.

Not Worried

Morden, England.—Parrot disease brings no fear to the healthy contented parrot that has been a pet in the household of Mrs. Mary Martin for more than 50 years.

Modern English Youth Lacking in Sentiment?

Hundreds of church bells throughout England are silent because young men refuse to take any interest in the delightful, if somewhat strenuous, art of bell ringing.

"We require six hefty young men to pull the ropes," said Rev. E. M. Davis, vicar of Cromer church, recently. "Our bells have not been rung for nearly a year."

Chinamen, motor-omnibus services from villages to towns and football matches are among the reasons given for the shortage by E. A. Young, secretary of the central council of church bellringers. "The present age," said Mr. Young to a representative of the Sunday Express, "is a rotten age. It is almost impossible to get bellringers in either London or the country."

"At one time villagers were proud to do the work for nothing. The young men of today want to know what he is going to get out of it. Nearly all bellringers now are either middle-aged men or women."

Modern Youth Had Eye to the Possible Future

"Christians take betrothals and marriages too lightly," said Rabbi Magnin. "They dart in and out of matrimony with as little concern as they pass through the revolving doors of their apartment houses. Matrimony has become a game, rather than a sacred obligation."

"Not very long ago a jewelry firm called me up and said that a young man, a Christian, by the way, had given my name as a reference in order to get an engagement ring on the installment plan. Later, when I saw the young fellow, I asked:

"Why in the world do you want to buy an engagement ring on the installment plan when I know you can afford to pay cash for it?"

"Because," he replied, "it relieves me of some of the responsibility for getting it back if the engagement is broken."—Los Angeles Times.

Ate Till His Chair Dipped

Perhaps the first dietician, says an article in Good Health, was Saneatorius, the inventor of one of the forms of the thermometer, of whom history relates that he was accustomed to weigh himself before each meal and also to determine the weight of the food he intended to eat. He built for himself a chair which was connected with a high steel rod on which there was a movable weight. The weight was pushed over to equal the amount of himself and his food. Then sitting in the chair he would eat until the chair dipped, when he would end his repast.

Whale's Diving Power

It would be impossible for a whale to descend to the bottom of the ocean at any considerable depth of water. Although it cannot be exactly known, it has been estimated that the maximum dive of the whale is approximately 100 fathoms—that is 660 feet—and at any greater depth than this the pressure of the water would be too great for the safety of the whale.

Lone "Ace" Saved King's Throne

Paris.—If truth is not stranger than fiction, then R. H. Davis, O. Henry et al will do some turning in their graves when they hear of Antoine Maillet, the only man on record who ever defeated an army single handed. Some weeks ago, Maillet, a French war ace, undertook a little job for King Tafari Makonen of Ethiopia.

It seems that a certain Ras Gussa Olie, a former husband of the former Empress Judith, craved to be king, and with that end in view drew up somewhat of an army which offered battle to the loyal troops not far from Addis Ababa, the capital. The king asked Maillet what he could do, and Maillet said he would see.

A few days later the intrepid flyer took out over the lonely mountains and treacherous ravines not to mention the impassable jungles and forests teeming with lions, elephants, crocodiles, boas, leopards, panthers and hyenas. When he sighted the enemy he dropped his majesty's regards. Those who were not killed ran. The king, learning of the news, was overcome with remorse at the demise of Olie, but nevertheless a reception befitting a hero was prepared at Addis Ababa for Maillet, who returned unruffled to discover that he had earned a place in history alongside of Lafayette.

Cat's Fur, Afire, Sets Entire Farm Ablaze

St. Omer, France.—The flaming torch of a scurrying tomcat, his fur ablaze, caused the destruction of an entire farm near here recently.

Warning himself contentedly by the hearth fire in the farmer's house, the cat was awakened by a spark which instantly set his furry body brilliantly afire. Crazy with pain, the little animal dashed out of the house into the adjoining barn, where he darted into the midst of a haystack, which immediately took fire.

The barn was soon a mass of roaring flames which were not long in leaping to the main dwelling. This building went up in smoke and flames in a short time and smaller adjacent structures went with it, completing the demolition of the farm.

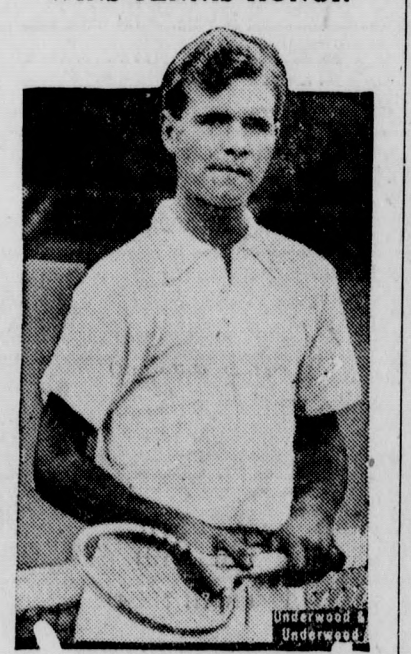

Airmen to Photograph Capital's Traffic Jams

Washington.—Perplexed Washington officials have sought army air corps aid in solving the Capital's traffic and parking problems. Army air men soon will soar over the congested Washington area photographing conditions as they exist in an effort to obtain data which will assist in reconfiguring traffic when new government buildings housing thousands of clerks are opened for business.

Fisherman Lands Pike and Hawk in Same Net

Stockholm.—To catch a pike and a hawk in the same net is something which does not happen to many fishermen, but Karl Sahlman, of Tosmte, in the province of Venland, has just accomplished the feat.

A large and powerful pike was caught in his net and a hawk, watching the attempts of the fish to free itself, swooped down in the hope of a meal. But its claws became tangled in the meshes and Sahlman hauled in a double catch. The bird was an unusually large specimen, measuring more than 3.25 feet between the wing tips.

Magazine Solicitor Uses Strong Arm Tactics

Billings, Mont.—A brusque stranger shoved a receipt for a magazine into the hands of twelve-year-old Richard Moore and demanded $3. The youth summoned and turned pale. "All right, if you won't I will," he exclaimed. He walked into the house, grabbed the child's penny bank which contained about $3 and disappeared.

Beautiful Subway Is Goal of Paris Chiefs

Paris.—The municipal council of the "most beautiful city in the world" is growing worried lest the city fall short of its reputation due to the metro stations. They feel that subways should be as handsome as any of the museums and monuments of Paris, and to that end they are talking of improving their underground stations by installing ornamental stairways, instead of the present cement and steel arrangement.

The local advertising agencies will doubtless rise in rage against this idea as the walls of the metro stations are covered for displaying posters which extol the products of La Belle France.

However, the council has a good chance of winning out in the end, as the Parisians are devoted to their city and extremely proud of its beauty, and probably will take this chance to enhance it.

Trouble Trails Honeymooners

Seattle.—Two young honeymoon couples who eloped from California arrived in Seattle in time to be served with summonses in a $10,000 damage action—just 11 days after their double wedding at Reno, Nev.

All the way from Wheeling, W. Va., Albert A. Hennisch motored to Oakland to claim his seventeen-year-old bride, Sylvia. With him he brought his college chum, William B. Dawson of Pittsburgh, Pa., who was to have been "best man."

It was "love at first sight" when Dawson met Sylvia's girl chum and the four decided to make it a double elopement and wedding.

Driving to Seattle on their double honeymoon to visit Hennisch's uncle and aunt, Justice of the Peace and Mrs. John B. Wright, the honeymooners were arrested by highway patrolmen at North Bend on request of auto-thefters in Eastern.

"We couldn't imagine why we were detained," Dawson said, "and then we found that a car we passed Sunday had plunged off the highway immediately afterwards. We were supposed to be responsible."

In the car, which dived down a 30-foot embankment, were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wilson, their eight-year-old daughter, Katherine, and Mr. and Mrs. John J. Cusworth. Mrs. Cusworth, Mrs. Wilson and her daughter were severely injured.

When authorities decided not to file reckless driving charges against the honeymooners they continued their trip to Judge Wright's home. The Wilsons and Cusworths, however, retained Attorney John J. Sullivan to bring personal injury actions against Dawson, owner of the car.

Why Birds Do Not Get Lost

The migration of birds, even across seas, is often explained as "instinct," but it is more than that. Their uncanny ability to find their way from their winter to summer home, and vice versa, is said to be due to the training of the young birds by the older ones, and to the keen sense of direction possessed by birds.

Menlo Park

The city council met Tuesday evening in regular session with all members answering roll call. Mr. Perrins of the P. G. & E. Company addressed the council in reference to changing the rates for street lighting. He said the charge for five and one half hours would be 13 cents per light, saving $15 a month. All peninsula towns, with the exception of Mountain View were having an all-night service. The council, considering the small saving, agreed to continue the all-night service.

An appropriation of $100 was made to temporarily fill the chuck holes within the city limits.

Blake wanted to know how long Chief Love was to act as building inspector. He desired to go on record as objecting to him acting in that capacity.

A vigorous argument was precipitated when W. J. Pembroke raised objections to the erection of the F. J. Furnival building on Oak Grove avenue, saying that it was not being built according to the building ordinances. Furnival at once accused Pembroke of not residing within the city limits and the latter came back with the charge that he, too, was a non-resident. Heated words were passed when the mayor ordered the belligerents to take their seats. Weeden told Pembroke that if he had any objections to make regarding the building he should put them in writing and that the matter would be promptly attended to. Thus ended what in the beginning looked like a fist encounter. Furnival claimed he was living up to all restrictions required by the city laws. The weed ordinance was presented by City Attorney Whitworth and will be adopted at a special meeting to be held on July 1st. Resolution 67 declaring weeds to be a public menace was adopted by the council.

City Clerk Fannie I. Kurtz was instructed to write the Southern Pacific Railroad Company and to urge the repairing and improvement of the plaza around the depot. It is in a deplorable condition and ought to be repaired.

The council ordered the purchase of a typewriter for the use of the chief of police and the city judge, to cost $48.60.

Claims to the amount of $1057.38 were ordered paid. The council adjourned to July 1st, to adopt the weed ordinance.

The Menlo Park Roll-for-Governor Club this week added 150 names to the membership roll. W. E. Monroe, secretary of the club, reports a lively interest being taken in the organization by the members. The people of Menlo Park owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Rolph. It must not be forgotten that during the war, when a suitable site was being sought on the peninsula for a cantonment, it was Mayor Rolph that came to the fore and selected Menlo Park, making it the largest town on the peninsula for two years. At one time 40,000 soldiers were located here. Thousands of dollars were spent with the merchants. That is the reason why every business man in town is boosting the mayor for governor. His vote in Menlo Park will be almost unanimous.

Colored Phones Now Offered by Company

Telephones in colors are now available L. C. Brown, manager for the telephone company, announced yesterday.

Telephones of the hand set type, with receiver and transmitter in one-piece, may be had in ivory, French gray, old brass, statuary bronze and oxidized silver. Telephone bell boxes may be finished to match the hand sets. Colored cords of the right shades complete the ensemble.

"The trend toward color is seen in many commonly used products,"
